

“Once Upon a Christmas Cheery,
In the Lab of Shakhshiri . . . ”

Bassam Shakhshiri, NSF Assistant Director for Science and Engineering Education, will weave Christmas chemistry magic—a tradition started over 160 years ago by English chemist and physicist Michael Faraday.

Place: National Academy of Sciences Auditorium
(Enter on C St. Between 21st and 22nd)

Date: Thursday, December 19, 1985      Time: 7:30 p.m.

Parking: NAS Above-Ground Parking Lot (Entrance Off 21st St.) and Street Parking After 6:30 p.m.

This fun-packed and educational presentation is aimed at people of all ages. School children, teachers, parents, and friends are invited. Instructions for home experiments will be given.

Santa Claus will be there!